

Is It Okay For Bethlehem School District Administrators To Strip Search Our Kids?

Are you okay with your child or grandchild being strip searched at school, by civilian administrators?

Do you know that today, they have full authority to do it?

Six years ago, the US Supreme Court ruled that some strip searches might go “too far”, possibly violating a child’s rights.

But, the judges did not define “too far”. So, with no clear rules, school administrators can strip search your child and if they do go too far, your only recourse is to challenge them in court after the damage is done. Not only that, but shockingly, there is no requirement that school officials even tell you that they strip searched your child. You might not find out until weeks later.

We understand that there may be a situation that calls for the personal search of a student. But at those rare times, we feel the search must be carried out by a uniformed police officer of the same gender. Obviously, police are trained to respect our constitutionally protected rights. Further, we feel that the school needs to notify parents as soon as the decision to conduct the search is made.

But the Bethlehem School Board is refusing to implement such a policy!

If you live in the district, please sign our petition. When you do, we automatically send an email to the Board President demanding that they protect our kids.
